

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A communication terminal device including a light-emitting unit for lighting at least either a display unit or an input unit, a reception unit for receiving contents data described in a predetermined information description language based on operation information, a code detection unit for detecting a predetermined code indicative of the end of contents data received by the reception unit, and a light-emission control unit for stopping light-emission by the light-emitting unit upon start of the reception of the contents data by the reception unit and starting light-emission by the light-emitting unit upon detection of the predetermined code by the code detection unit.

5
10